EXPERIENCE AND INQUIRY — A MUSICAL JOURNEY

Investigation and research can take many forms. Musicians bring mind, body and emotion to an art that is in itself highly integrative. Can the physical intuitions of a musician offer a pathway to notions of authenticity and of non-verbal understandings? Guest professor and concert pianist William Westney describes his journey of inquiry and draws parallels to the life and work of Hans Christian Andersen, concluding his presentation with a short performance.

The lecture is followed by a reception hosted by the Institute of Philosophy, Education and the Study of Religions. The lecture and reception are free of charge and all are welcome.
